

Mind, Body and Spirit: Faith Community Nurses

Interfaith course teaches active RNs how to provide wholistic healthcare to faith communities

Faith community nurses minister to the physical, emotional and spiritual needs of a faith community. This is a recognized specialty of nursing by the American Nurses Association. Duet offers the Foundations of Faith Community Nursing course that gives registered nurses the skills needed to start a congregational health program and train them in their roles as:

- Integrator of faith and health
- Advocate and resource referral agent
- Health educator
- Health and wellness counselor
- Coordinators and facilitators of volunteers
- Support group facilitator

Trained faith community nurses are colleagues in ministry with pastors and members, enhancing and supporting their work rather than duplicating services from health care professionals or the ministerial staff. Do you know a registered nurse who'd be interested in learning more about faith community nursing and developing a health ministry program? Begin by sharing this course information today!
