Embracing challenging conversations about death and dying

Cameron Svendsen, MSW, LCSW, will provide a comprehensive description of hospice service for patients and families, focusing on practical and compassionate approaches to end-of-life care. Through clear communication strategies and real-life testimonials, Mr. Svendsen will illustrate how early hospice care can lead to better symptom management and more meaningful family interactions.

Topics Addressed:

- Selecting the right hospice provider: Accreditation, staff qualifications, service locations
- Medicare's hospice benefit: Eligibility and covered services
- Common misconceptions
- Benefits of timely hospice intervention

About the Speaker:

Cameron Svendsen is a licensed clinical social worker, speaker, and author with over 25 years of service in healthcare. He co-founded Palliative Care Alliance, a trailblazing program extending support to patients with chronic and serious illnesses in the comfort of their homes. Currently, Cameron serves as Chief Strategy Officer for a select group of innovative healthcare companies in Phoenix. He enlightens audiences on topics including brain health, senior home care, and advanced care planning. His new book, Finally Fearless, delves into the human psyche, offering a profound exploration of our innate fear of death and dying, guiding us toward understanding and acceptance.
